Chair report

It has been a privilege to represent PRECI as Chair for another year. The 2025-2026 year has been both productive and significant for our organisation.Together, we have strengthened PRECI's national profile, increased awareness of our work, deepened engagement with members and stakeholders, and continued to bring research into everyday practice. These achievements reflect the shared commitment, expertise and generosity of the PRECI Board.

Supporting implementation of the Framework

A central focus was supporting implementation of the National Best Practice Framework for Early Childhood Intervention. Even without dedicated funding for this activity, PRECI remained firmly committed to providing implementation support to the sector. PRECI led an extensive program of targeted and face-to-face consultations, jurisdictional engagement and workshops leading to development of self-reflection tools and early exploration of practitioner standards. Feedback from practitioners, organisations, families and other key stakeholders has helped shape implementation priorities and reinforced PRECI's role in connecting evidence, policy and everyday practice.

PRECI also worked to raise awareness of the Framework through presentations and participation at the Early Childhood Australia National Conference in Perth, the Early Childhood Australia Rural and Remote Conference in Coffs Harbour, the International Society on Early Intervention Conference in Lisbon and the European Academy of Childhood Disability Conference in Galway. These opportunities allowed PRECI to share the Framework with diverse audiences, learn from others and build relationships across the sector.

Growing our influence and advocacy

Our influence and visibility grew through sustained engagement with governments, the NDIA, universities, professional associations, peak bodies, services, family and advocacy organisations, funders and national networks. Board representatives contributed to advisory groups, forums, roundtables and policy discussions across Australia. These connections have increased awareness of PRECI, supported closer alignment with state and territory priorities, and opened new opportunities for collaboration in research, professional development, workforce capability and Framework implementation.

Chair report

PRECI maintained an active advocacy voice. Our website contains key submissions and papers addressing the Inquiry into the Thriving Kids Initiative, the NDIS Annual Pricing Review as well as the PRECI Thriving Kids discussion paper. Board and working group members also contributed to collaborative sector submissions and considered emerging legislative, safeguarding, pricing and service-system reforms. Through this work, PRECI has sought to ensure that early childhood intervention evidence, quality practice, and the experiences of children, families and practitioners are represented in national conversations.

Conference 2026

The third National PRECI Conference, held in Adelaide in May 2026, was a major highlight. It created a warm and positive sense of community, bringing together practitioners, researchers, families, leaders and policy stakeholders to connect, share ideas and network around a common commitment to evidence-informed early childhood intervention. The breadth of presentations, national and international speakers, parent participation, pre-conference workshops and positive feedback reinforced PRECI's growing role as a national connector across research, practice and policy. I sincerely thank everyone who helped plan, support and deliver such a welcoming and successful event. An unexpected moment during the Conference was the Australian Government's announcement of funding to support implementation of the Framework.

Bringing research into everyday practice

Knowledge translation remained central to our work. The PRECI Knowledge Hub, including Research Snapshots, webinars, podcasts and videos, together with our commitment to developing learning modules, offered practical ways for members and the broader sector to engage with evidence. University partnerships supported student projects focused on authentic assessment, early identification of developmental delay, child voice and agency, working with culturally and linguistically diverse families, discipline-specific learning modules and decision-making resources. We also invested in a Learning Management System and coaching platform to strengthen future training, learning and implementation activity.

Chair report

Member engagement

Member engagement is a critical focus for PRECI, and it was encouraging to see participation and direct contact increase during the year. Newsletters, social media, webinars, conference activities, communities of practice, direct follow-up, and invitations to contribute to working groups, Research Snapshots and resource development created more ways for members to be involved. The support provided by PRECI members and supporters, and their participation across our activities, has been invaluable. Although there were challenges with the website and membership platform, considerable care was taken to resolve issues and support members individually. This experience is informing our ongoing work to make engagement easier, more reliable and more rewarding.

Building a stronger organisation

PRECI continued to mature as an organisation. Constitutional changes were progressed and lodged, governance registers and policies were strengthened and strategic planning clarified priorities for our next phase. We were delighted to achieve Deductible Gift Recipient status and to receive our first donations. Every donation, no matter the size, directly assists PRECI to continue its work, and we are deeply grateful to those who have chosen to support us in this way.

Another important milestone was the appointment of Michelle Goldsmith as PRECI's first employee, providing part-time administrative support. This was a significant step for a volunteer-led organisation. Michelle's contribution to member communications, membership registrations and learning resources has already made a valued difference and strengthened the support available to the Board and our members.

Chair report

An amazing dedicated working Board

PRECI remains a working Board operating in a volunteer capacity. Board members do far more than govern. They lead working groups, develop submissions and resources, build partnerships, support events, review policies, contribute specialist expertise and respond to a rapidly changing national environment. The PRECI team has worked together with generosity, flexibility, good humour and a shared determination to advance evidence-informed early childhood intervention. This willingness to contribute wherever needed is one of our organisation's greatest strengths.

On behalf of PRECI, I extend my heartfelt appreciation to every Board member for the time, expertise, care and leadership contributed throughout the year. I also warmly thank our volunteers, whose work across policy, marketing, graphic design, research, website support and project activities has greatly expanded what PRECI has been able to achieve. To our members and supporters, thank you for your trust, encouragement and active participation.

Your involvement gives purpose and momentum to our work.

We end the year with stronger connections and much to look forward to. The momentum created through the Framework, our national conference, growing member engagement and expanding partnerships provides a strong foundation for the future. I look forward with optimism to PRECI's continued growth over the coming year, and to working together as we champion high-quality, equitable and evidence-informed early childhood intervention so that young children and their families can thrive.

National Best Practice Framework for ECI

Following release of the National Best Practice Framework for Early Childhood Intervention (ECI) (The Framework) in September 2025, PRECI quickly swung into action to support implementation through four key approaches.

1. Key Stakeholder consultations

In late 2025 we facilitated ten targeted online consultations with practitioners, researchers, policy makers, and representatives from advocacy organisations, peak bodies and referrers such as GPs and developmental paediatricians. During the one-hour consultations we shared information about the Framework and associated resources, discussed ways to work together to support implementation, and gained critical insights into implementation enablers and barriers. See report here.

2. From Principles to Practice Implementation Workshops

In early-mid 2026 we convened in-person workshops in Brisbane, Sydney, Hobart and Launceston. The focus of the workshops was to deepen knowledge of the Framework and directly support initial stages of individual, team and community-wide implementation. Further workshops will be held in all other States and Territories in the second half of 2026. See 2025-2026 interim report here.

Sydney and Brisbane workshops

National Best Practice Framework for ECI

3. Professional Standards for ECI Practitioners Workshops
On our road trip also we also commenced work on the co-development of ECI Professional Standards. We discussed related professional standards and research and worked together on developing draft competencies. This was the first stage of a larger Professional Standards project being led by PRECI.

4. Practice Based Coaching Workshops
We offered full-day in each jurisdiction to develop practitioners knowledge, skills and confidence in utilising Practice Based Coaching as the primary adult learning strategy when working with parents/carers and other adults. Utilising coaching practices is the primary means for ECI practitioners to provide family-centred strengths-based support.

It's been an absolute privilege to hear directly from the sector, co-produce Framework implementation supports, and provide evidence-based professional learning activities. We look forward to our future work together.

Mentoring Program

In 2025, PRECI introduced a Board Mentorship Program as part of its broader succession planning strategy, alongside a board skills audit and updated governance policies. The program aimed to build a diverse, capable board, provide clear leadership pathways for members, and support informed decision-making around board nomination.

Running from July to November 2025 and led by board mentors Kerry Bull and Megan Fox, the program matched seven PRECI members from across the for-profit, not-for-profit, university, and research sectors with a mentor. The mentees came from five states. Mentees observed board and subgroup meetings, engaged in structured reflective mentoring sessions, and completed pre-reading on PRECI's policies and governance framework.

At the end of the program, evaluation through a focus group and written feedback found the program significantly strengthened participants' understanding of board governance and decision-making, with subgroup observation, one-on-one mentoring, and the transparency of the process rated as most valuable. Participants also highlighted the strong culture of trust and open discussion evident within the board. The program delivered strong outcomes: six of the seven mentees nominated for the board, and four were elected at the November AGM, filling all available positions. The remaining mentees expressed continued interest in future involvement.

Mentoring Program

Recommendations for 2026 and beyond

- Building on mentee feedback and evaluation findings, the following recommendations have been endorsed to strengthen the program going forward:
- Continue the program in 2026, with leadership transitioning to a new PRECI director following Kerry Bull's departure from the board.
- Adapt the program design in response to mentee feedback, including a more formalised induction, a concise written overview of board and subcommittee roles and responsibilities, and themed reflection sessions.
- Strengthen subgroup participation, ensuring mentees are engaged earlier and more consistently, with the opportunity to contribute to a tangible outcome for the board.
- Improve peer connection among mentees through mechanisms such as facilitated introductions, a buddy system, or a shared online space for informal peer support.
- Introduce ongoing support for newly elected directors, pairing them with a mentor or director “buddy” for reflection and feedback during their first three to four months in the role.
- Consider flexible program delivery, such as staggered or rolling intake points across the year, to improve accessibility for future mentees.

These recommendations reflect a strong overall endorsement of the program's value, with proposed changes focused on improving clarity, consistency, and the depth of engagement for future participants.

PRECI Reflect

PRECI Reflect continued to provide a welcoming space for the early childhood intervention sector to come together, share practice wisdom and engage in thoughtful discussion about the National Best Practice Framework for Early Childhood Intervention.

Across a three-part Community of Practice series, co-facilitated by members of the team involved in developing the Framework, participants explored how the Framework can support high-quality, evidence-informed and family-centred practice. Conversations focused on practical tools and key areas of implementation, including the Decision-Making Guide, teamwork, and considerations about how much, how often and for how long supports are provided.

We are grateful to the members who generously contributed their insights, brought curiosity and openness to the discussions, and helped strengthen shared learning across the sector. Their participation made PRECI Reflect a rich and collaborative learning space, supporting ongoing reflection, connection and practice development for the benefit of children, families and communities.

We look forward to next year's series that continues the discussions that will take time to reflect together on family-centred practice, child agency and voice and who we work alongside others to support children and families.

Professional development options

During the last financial year, PRECI brought together our work on research snapshots, webinars, podcasts and Communities of Practice into the one PD options working group in order to strengthen consistency and cohesion across all forms of free PD that PRECI currently offers for the sector.

Our research snapshots continue to be highly valued, with nine snapshots produced in the 2025/2026 financial year. These snapshots provide a valuable translation of research to practice and support the development of research literacy. At the start of the year we revised our research snapshot template to include a focus on the National Best Practice Framework for Early Childhood Intervention. This addition has supported reflection on how the findings of each snapshot relate to the Framework and is one element of our ongoing work to support implementation of the Framework in practice.

We have also offered a range of webinars, including a series in 2026 that focused specifically on Thriving Kids. Our webinars provide an opportunity to dig deeper into a particular topic, hearing from leaders in the sector, with an opportunity for attendees to ask questions to further their learning. In 2025/2026 we had over 2200 registrations for our webinars.

PRECI has also expanded our podcast offering following the highly successful ‘Unpacking the Framework’ series. This has been an exciting addition to our suite of PD options, with PRECI hitting the 1000 download milestone earlier this year.

PRECI is pleased to offer a range of free professional development opportunities that are aimed at translating research into practice and supporting high-quality practice in ECI.

Conference 2026

The 3rd National PRECI Conference, held in Adelaide from 13 th –15 th May 2026, was a highly successful event that brought together 399 professionals, researchers, practitioners, and people with lived experience from across Australia and internationally.

Under the theme Better practice. Better outcomes. Better futures., the conference provided a strong platform for sharing research, practice innovation and policy perspectives across the early childhood intervention (ECI) sector. The program featured international and national keynote speakers, 124 submitted abstracts, pre-conference workshops, and opportunities for networking and collaboration. Importantly, the conference also strengthened PRECI's role as a national forum for knowledge exchange and sector leadership, including current government reforms and the future direction of ECI supports.

Delegate feedback was overwhelmingly positive, with 93% reporting that the conference met their expectations and 93% indicating that they would consider attending a future PRECI conference and recommend it to colleagues.

The success of PRECI 2026 reflects the commitment of the organising committee, speakers, sponsors, exhibitors and, most importantly, the ECI community whose knowledge, expertise and shared commitment continue to shape better practice and better outcomes for children and families.

Treasurer’s report

The 2025/2026 financial year saw revenue generated predominantly through our successful biennial conference and grants (remaining Best Practice Framework grant funding along with Lotterywest and National Disability Conference Initiative grants). Our membership subscription increased by just over 100% from last financial year with this increase largely linked to conference registration.

Excitingly, we added salary expenditure this year, as we employed our first staff member. Michelle assists us with many of our administrative tasks such as managing memberships and compiling the monthly newsletters.

We are eternally grateful to the Board Directors and other volunteers for their hard work and commitment (often outside their other full time responsibilities) to the many projects and activities delivered by PRECI (see Chair’s report). As detailed in the attached reports, the total income for the 2025/2026 financial year was $282,880.54, with grant funding accounting for 80% of this. Expenses totalled $252,575.80, with project expenses again making up the largest share. This resulted in a net profit of $30,304.74.

PRECI looks forward to further growth in the 2026/2027 financial year, as we engage with members and the broader sector to implement the Best Practice Framework. Government funding to support this cause will contribute to the financial sustainability of the organisation.
